

To be honest, I'm not sure what Low Power FM (LPFM) really means, but if it means jeopardizing the status of KLOVE, to which I listen via traditional radio and online throughout each and every day, then I am against it.

This radio station is accomplishing great and mighty things through their service to each community within radio-shot, and those who tune in electronically over the internet.

If this LPFM move means that KLOVE will lose their license, or in any other way is forced to cease broadcasting, many people who have made it a daily routine to listen for strength and encouragement will be severely affected.

If my voice means anything or carries any weight, I implore you NOT to make this move.
